For 25 years The Hawaiian Moving Company was a scheduled Sunday night stop for island family viewers. As a multiple Emmy and Iris award winning show, the Hawaiian Moving Company has produced over 2500 segments highlighting outstanding people, places, and things from the islands and around the world.

On each show host Mike Perry takes the audience on an enthusiastic look at life through the folks he tracks down. With a range of topics as broad as Hawaii's people themselves, the show uncovers unusual segments that will appeal and entertain to everyone. It's not unusual for viewers to be taken scuba diving with sharks, meet the world's most prolific Barbie Doll collector, and discover a man who risks his life to get incredible molten lava shots... all in a half-hour episode. Couple that with segments shot from more than 25 countries and you can see how the Moving Company got its name.
